Good to know

- Implants are made by compounding pharmacies. They are not PBS-subsidised, so private fees apply.
- Oestradiol implants are not recommended for starting therapy, but many people prefer them once treatment is settled. Blood tests are used to time the next implant.
- Aftercare: keep the site clean and dry for a day or two, and expect some bruising.
- If you have surgery planned, tell your surgeon and your prescriber about the implant and when it was put in.

Contact the clinic if the site becomes red, hot, painful or starts to discharge.

Write each blood test result with its units, for example pmol/L for oestradiol or nmol/L for testosterone.
